Tackling Indigenous Smoking
JURISDICTIONAL WORKSHOP REPORT

Western Australia, Northern Territory, South
Australia & the Australian Capital Territory

Walyalup (Fremantle)
12 to 13 March 2023

Introduction

The Tackling Indigenous Smoking (TIS) jurisdictional workshops are an important way in which the National Best Practice Unit Tackling Indigenous Smoking (NBPU TIS) provides support to the TIS teams managed through the Regional Tobacco Control Grant (RTCG) organisations. The aims of TIS workshops include:

- reviewing Grant Recipient priorities and the appropriate support that the NBPU needs to provide
- sharing evidence and best practice, and strategies for adaptation at local and regional levels
- resolving implementation challenges
- enhancing support, collaboration, network building and communication
- providing training and tools to assist in program delivery
- support for performance reporting and evaluation methods and skills
- dissemination of information and tools on performance reporting, data collection and evaluation
- supporting Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander leadership in tobacco control.

This Workshop was held in Western Australia, for the TIS teams from Western Australia, Northern Territory, South Australia and the Australian Capital Territory.

Attendance

The workshop was attended by 94 participants, including 62 representatives from 15 out of the 16 Lead Organisations and/or their partner organisations from the relevant jurisdictions. See Attachment A for a list of participants.

3. Ready to Mingle - Speed Networking (Glenn Clarke, NBPU TIS Project Officer)

This fast-paced interactive session facilitated TIS workers to connect with as many people from other teams, states, and territories as possible in a short time. Participants were initially allocated to one of 10 tables with 6-7 TIS workers from other organisations. They had five minutes to get to know one another, then when the bell rang had to move to a new table, ensuring they met new people every time. A total of 10 rounds were completed. Conversation starters such as 'If you were to create a slogan for your life, what would it be?' and 'What is your superpower today?' were placed on each table. These encouraged lively exchanges, which set a positive tone for the rest of the day.

4. Spot the Call (to Action) (Penney Upton, NPBU TIS)

A play on traditional 'spot the ball' promotions, this competition ran throughout the two days of the workshop. Participants were reminded of the purpose, importance, and key features of an effective health promotion 'call to action.' Participants were asked to identify the call to action in each of the success stories shared by teams, and rate them for:

- clarity
- persuasion
- 'wow' factor

At the end of the workshop everyone voted for the best call to action. Winning teams were KAMS and Central Australian Aboriginal Congress.

The aim of this session was to provide a practical guide to partnership working. Fundamental components of consortium working including collaboration and shared identity were described. This should have been followed up with an interactive session during which participants would have had the opportunity to map out current and potential partnerships, with a focus on strengths and purpose of those relationship and how to maintain an effective collaboration. Unfortunately, due to the program overrunning this aspect of the presentation was not delivered.

20. Closing Remarks (Prof Tom Calma AO)

Professor Calma summarized the key points of the workshop, thanked participants for their attendance and wished them safe travels on their return to their services.

Participant Evaluation

Each TIS workshop includes participant evaluation, with both quantitative and qualitative feedback. This assists the NBPU TIS to ensure that future workshops are of most use to Grant Recipients and their TIS teams.

Participant evaluation feedback was collected using an online survey platform (Qualtrics). A total of 67 responses to the survey were received. The majority provided positive and constructive feedback.

All sessions were well received by the majority of survey respondents with an average of 76% of responses rating Day 1 sessions and 73% of Day 2 sessions as 'very useful'. An average of 3% of responses rated Day 1 Sessions and 4% of Day 2 Sessions as 'not at all useful'. See Figures 1 and 2 for details.

Overall, qualitative feedback from participants was very positive:

Great to meet other TIS teams and to see what they are working and focusing on.

Ready to mingle activity was great, everyone really got into it

It's great having the team presentations throughout the day. It's also great doing the networking mingle activity we tended to share stories about our programs and used the questions more as an ice breaker. It also feels like a smaller group this year which is a lot more comfortable.

Already have ideas to implement when we get home.

Everyone done an amazing job and I'm proud the way TIS will be heading in the future

However, there were some suggestions for improvements including about ensuring that presentations stick to the time allocated to ensure that the sessions do not go over time:

Some teams went well over time and presenters, we stuck to the time frame.

Need to have a bell or something to warn people when they have 2 minutes left. Going overtime and pushing the whole schedule behind not only eats into personal break times, but also increases the chance of people zoning out and getting distracted and bored.

Would like to spend more time learning about what other teams have done for ideas. I don't think 10 mins is enough.

Each session should be 10min not 15mins. Too long to sit and listen.

Professor Tom's wrap up and feedback on the first day led to mixed responses: some felt it was too confronting, while others felt that it was useful challenge:

To be honest I felt very nervous and scared to present on this day after Tom's talk at the end of day 1. It was quite disempowering and made us feel like we aren't doing a good job but we do know as a team that we do really good work and we do know what we are doing.

The closing from Tom has HARSH & Negative! It felt like TIS team's efforts aren't acceptable or not doing what we should be. I disagree with this!

Professor Tom Calma feedback was helpful and a reminder of TIS requirements

There were also some practical suggestions for improvements, including:

Even 3 days to help spread out or 2.5 days would be good.

We need more time to discuss with other teams about their plans and what works for them - so we can get ideas for planning and activities in future.

Be good to have a Q&A session maybe once a day with a panel of all speakers as some questions get thought of after having time to reflect.

More breaks and movement. Spread content out over more days. Exhausting trying to learn and retain and stay focussed over such a short period.

Would have liked to see a session on Partner Organisations, perhaps too early so maybe for next year?

I think we could just meet with the top end remote community teams. The teams that are experiencing the same environments and settings are the ones we want to connect with.
